

Protect Your Key Assets with Key-Person Life Insurance

Most organizations employ at least one individual who is essential to the company's success. This person may be a partner, majority stockholder or an individual with expertise that is unmatched throughout the rest of the company. If this person's exit from the company is planned, such as retirement or voluntary termination, then you can prepare for the loss and take the necessary precautions to minimize the impact. However, if the departure is unplanned due to a death, disabling accident or quitting on the spot, then the company is exposed to financial risks. If your organization employs individuals who are vital to its success, consider Key-Person Life Insurance to offset your risk. This insurance solution can protect your organization's solvency in the event that you lose the key person or people without warning, and also the investments made by lenders and investors to the company.

How Does Key-Person Life Insurance Work?

It is important to know how Key-Person Life insurance works while you consider if it's the right fit for your company:

- Employer purchases life insurance on the key individual(s).
- Employer is the beneficiary of the life insurance policy and applies for and owns the policy. If the key employee dies prematurely, the policy pays out to the employer.

- Tax-free dollars from the policy can be put towards finding, hiring and training a replacement employee, compensation for lost business during the transition and/or financing timely business transactions.
- Policy can be transferred to a departing key employee as a retirement benefit or to a different key individual, upon the retirement of the original key employee.
- Can be used to buy out the key employee's shares or interest in the company.
- Premiums are based on several factors, including the key employee's age, physical conditions and health history. The amount of coverage also affects the premium.

- Estimate the value of your key employees. Think about the projects that would be lost without these people, the amount of sales generated by these people and costs associated with replacing them.
- Determine if this coverage is necessary, as Credit Insurance will cover outstanding loans and debts.
- Create a business continuation plan that outlines how your business will function if you lose key employees. This plan is vital, in addition to proper coverage.
